[N] NOTICIAS (*)

[CNBC] Gold and oil have been two of the hottest trades of the past one year. One of them has to break

What's good for energy stocks may be bad for precious metals if the rally in crude means a rise in Treasury yields, which usually means lower gold prices.

[CNBC] Data suggests 'hiring recession' may be behind us - but the Iran war poses job market risks

Hiring activity increased in March, according to federal data issued Tuesday. However, the Iran war threatens to stall that progress in the job market.

[CNBC] U.S. says 'Project Freedom' will reopen Hormuz Strait for commerce. Experts are skeptical

President Donald Trump announced the operation Sunday, saying the U.S. will "guide" ships stuck due to the Iran war through the Strait of Hormuz.

[AI Jazeera] Could OPEC break lead to era of energy volatility?

How unstable is the global oil market?

[AI Jazeera] Miscalculation over Strait of Hormuz could 'bring an all-out war'

Neither the US nor Iran are willing to compromise on the Strait of Hormuz, increasing the chance of miscalculation.

[AI Jazeera] Ukraine, Russia exchange drone strikes ahead of V-Day 'ceasefire'

Ukraine strikes multiple sites in Moscow, following Russia's strikes on a Ukrainian gas production facility.

[CNBC] Micron zooms past $700 billion market cap as rally in memory stocks accelerates

Micron has emerged as one of the most valuable U.S. tech companies thanks to insatiable demand for memory that's needed in AI chips.

[CNBC] Iran doesn't have 'kamikaze dolphins,' Hegseth says. But marine mammals have a long history of military use

Several countries, including the U.S., have a history of using dolphins in conflict areas, though not as weapons.
